Historical Audiovisuals Program: Copying Procedures

The National Library of Medicine does not have the capacity to copy films and videos onsite; therefore, all copying is contracted out to vendors. These vendors, Colorlab Inc. and BonoLabs, have been thoroughly evaluated for their ability to handle historical films and serve patrons of the Library.

To have a copy made of a film/videotape, contact the vendor directly to make arrangements (see accompanying form with vendor contact information). They will provide a price for the copying which should include the cost for picking the film up at the Library and returning it once the copying is completed. The Library does not charge patrons a service fee for copying.

After the arrangements with the vendor have been made, both the User Agreement and the Restriction Notice have to be filled out and mailed, faxed, or scanned/e-mailed to:

Once the forms have been received, we will contact the patron to confirm the arrangements, then deliver the film(s) to the Historical Audiovisuals Film Technician, who creates a manifest and notifies the Preservation Section of the National Library of Medicine. The Preservation Section will contact the vendor and arrange for the film(s) to be picked up.

After the film has been copied, the vendor will send the copy to the patron and return the original to the Library.

If using the film in a production, please include the phrase: Courtesy National Library of Medicine.
