Dear Fran and Jack:

It certainly was very nice to talk to both of you a couple of nights ago. I had already started to dictate this letter but had not finished it. It certainly was good news to hear about Alec and I am very happy that he changed his mind after due consideration about the other approach to the Army. It would have, in my opinion, put quite a handicap on his life. So, everything worked out as I had confidence that it would after I reviewed his medical history. I think Sperry told you that I snatched the two pretty shirts from under the Christmas tree and wore them as though I did not have any more shirts. Thank you very much for them and the other gifts which you sent at Christmastime. It is good to know that you both are in good health and I hope that Fran is pretty well straightened out by now and that things are generally moving well in this turbulent world in which we live.

Love and best wishes,

Em and Papa Leonidas
