Dear Berry:

I have looked to hear from you for almost two years. I was especially curious about the pictures we posed for. I do hope, however, that you and family are doing nicely. Julia and I saw one newspaper photo of your daughter, and agreed that she was a chip off the old block-so to speak.

Please send me Homer Smith's address. I plan to go to New York this summer and want to look him up. Julia joins me in extending to you and family our warmest personal regards. Incidentally, I asked Charles Williams about where he was on that Sunday afternoon when we were looking for him. His reply was that he was at home resting. You see being principal of a big time Negro High School is a very trying and tiresome ordeal. I would expect much more rigorous than the practice of medicine, and, certainly, more taxing than a village Elementary Principal. What would the French say? Ne C'est pas? Eh? Please write soon.

Faternally yours,

Homer
