Films and videos from the National Library of Medicine’s Historical Audiovisuals Collection may be duplicated if they are determined to be in the public domain, or if proof of permission from the copyright holder has been received by the History of Medicine Division.

Before any film or video can be copied, the User Agreement (one per title) and the Restriction Notice (one completed notice with list of titles attached) must be completed and returned to us. The forms may be mailed, faxed, or scanned/e-mailed.

The laboratory approved to make reproductions of our vintage footage is:

George Blood LB
Audio/Video/Film/Data
21 West Highland Avenue
Philadelphia PA  19118
215-248-2100

Arrangements are in place for shipping the material to the vendor, with costs charged to the patron. When you have made financial arrangements with the laboratory, please notify us so we can arrange for pickup. The vendor will tell you the cost of conversion and the length of time it will take to complete the job.
